

Jack David Lakso

1965

David Lakso was a successful leader in alternative and renewable energy resources, including wind, solar and energy storage. He was recognized for his work in start-up organizations by providing staff development at all levels based on setting direction and providing strategies for the companies. He was a skilled event manager who excelled at showcasing products and services. He developed an application for battery storage used with wind generation to provide power purchase agreements for green energy to be used in schools and water treatment facilities. He started national and international sales channels for software firms and launched a Hispanic website for a start-up long distance internet company. David was recognized by his employers as a Chairman's Club award winner four times, and President's Circle Award winner twice.
